What To Do Around Ubud

Ubud is home to some of the greatest spots around Bali, including one of Bali's greatest Monkey Forests, a sanctuary to hundreds of monkeys which swing, jump and have made the forest their home. Within an arm's reach of the Ubud Art Market, you are to find the 'Ubud Royal Palace', also known as Puri Saren Agung. This intricately designed, photogenic spot holds some of the greatest Balinese architecture and design from the 1800s, Visiting both the Ubud Art Market and Ubud Palace in the morning is recommended as they can become quite crowded with tourists by afternoon or evening time.

Bali

Essentials

Culture

Please respect Bali's strong culture and traditions throughout the island, especially within temples. Both male and females are required to wear sarong, sleeveless and short clothing is not allowed nor is it recommended

Cleanliness around Bali

Respecting the cleanliness around Bali is a very important aspect of Balinese culture, throwing cigarette butts and loitering around streets, temple entrances is seen as a disgrace and is not recommended.

Balinese Cuisine

Try the local balinese cuisine! Such as nasi campur (Mixed rice), Sambel Matah (Chilli in coconut oil), Babi guling (Roasted pork), Gado-Gado, (Mixed vegetables with nut sauce), Sate Ayam (Chicken skewers) and so many more! Many of these dishes are relatively spicier than food found in European / Australian regions, so make sure you plan accordingly!

Traffic Jams & Bali Lifestyle

Please don't be upset on the road, the traffic jams can be quite slow, or if your driver is not driving as fast as expected, or if food can take slightly longer to be served. This is partly due to the balinese lifestyle that takes place throughout the island. Also, do not be surprised if your food is served individually, it is a customary nature in Indonesia that the food is served immediately when it's ready, regardless of who gets their food first.

Road Access

in Ubud is generally not in the best shape, roads are also smaller compared to those found in the south of Bali or Denpasar. Due to this, please wear a helmet if you are to ride a motorcycle and always ensure to wear your seatbelt when driving a car. You will have to pay a fine if you are not wearing a helmet or not in possession of any form of identification / driver's license.

Tipping and Bargaining

Most Balinese restaurants do not expect any form of tips, but you are more than welcome to do so freely. When you are purchasing something in a public market, please also be aware that price negotiation and bargains is a big part of balinese culture!

Bali is full of hidden and pleasant surprises, this is truly an island that has much more than meets the eye. People are always very welcoming towards anybody. They are always willing to answer any questions you may have, Balinese folk can typically answer a couple of questions in English, just enough to get by.

If you do have absolutely any questions, please don't hesitate to reach out to us.
